

Clare Archer is a Senior Manager in Gilbane Building Company's Mid-Atlantic Region, based in Arlington, VA.

After earning a Bachelor of Science degree from Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Ms. Archer went to work for an architecture/engineering/construction management firm in Arlington, VA. With a particular interest in the construction industry she began working with Gilbane Building Company in 1997. In her role as a Senior Manager there, Archer focuses on business and client development specifically for the public sector—local, state and federal agencies —mainly in the District of Columbia, Northern Virginia and Maryland, as well as U.S. General Services Administration work undertaken by Gilbane across the country.

Clare is an active member of AGC of America, currently serving as the Chair of the GSA and Veteran's Affairs Committee. Previously as a member of the AGC Government Affairs Committee Clare was a leader on the GSA Construction Manager as Constructor (CMc) task force, on which she worked closely with GSA representatives from across the country in a four-year effort to develop a standard template and language for use of this delivery system within GSA. She is currently the President of AGC of Metropolitan Washington DC and has served on the Board or in an officer position with for over 10 years. She is also involved in the District of Columbia Building Industry Association (DCBIA), and served as a member of the U.S. Department of State's Interagency Advisory Council. Clare lives in Washington, DC with her husband John and two sons.
